

OPEN ROUTE PIVOT PLAN

PIVOTING

What it is: A method of utilizing the undertime of one or several carriers to perform duties on a temporary vacant route or to cover absences.

What it is not: Asking employees to double case routes resulting in the possible use of OT.

Open Route Pivot Plan

- With declining volumes, it is vital that we capture the resulting under time on routes by pivoting carriers both in the office and the street.
- Part of the plan is the Open Route Pivot Board which is a tool for supervisors to use to help capture undertime. It provides carriers with the necessary information for their work assignment and expectations for the day

Open Route Pivot Plan

- The Pivot Board will be used to identify the open routes/assignments for the day
- The board should be completed and placed adjacent to the time clock to ensure carriers see it upon clocking in.
- Those carriers scheduled first on the open route should clock to that route and begin their pivoting assignment immediately.

Open Route Pivot Plan

- As a visual reminder, an orange cone should be placed on the case of the carrier who is scheduled to work the open route first.

Open Route Pivot Plan

Example:

The office has 4 open routes today, we'll review 2 of them. The Pivot Board is posted by the time clock for carriers to read when clocking in for their assignments

Open Route Pivot Plan

- The carrier work assignments are entered into DOIS
- The supervisor will need to monitor carriers to ensure they report to their pivot at the proper time.
- The orange cone should be returned to the supervisor who will place it on the case of the carrier working on the open route as a visual reminder that the carrier is away from their case pivoting on another route.
